“By the grace of her own family, Sarah was the loving hand who helped guide me as I grew up. Among many other honorable traits, she has instilled into me values of love, fairness and acceptance, but the most important of these, she would show, is love. In the same way Mary Poppins was a nanny, Sarah was fun, loving and strict (but never too strict). I will miss her greatly but she will remain in my heart always.

A couple of memories of Sarah, or RoRo as I affectionately call her (because I couldn't pronounce her name properly as a child):

Once while I was suppose to be napping. I was playing on the floor of my bedroom. I could hear Sarah walking down the hall on her way to check on me. I dove onto my bed and shut my eyes right before she opened the door. I could hear Sarah standing there when she said laughing, “I know you're not asleep.” I started to laugh with her and asked how she knew. She told me my eyes were squeezed so tight she was afraid I might hurt myself.

Another memory, and probably my favorite, was when I was around five years old, I was sitting on her lap, at the end of the day, playing with her hand. I began to study it as children do, and noticed it was darker than my hand. I looked up at her and asked, “Why is your hand darker than my hand?” She looked at me and without missing a beat said, “That's because God painted some people and didn't paint others.” Sarah, in her very gentle and beautiful way, showed me how God simply made us all unique.

Sarah was beautiful, loving and authentic and I am deeply grateful to have had her in my life.
